INVENTOR CREATES OP ART MACHINE

PETER McCAFFREY OF ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N.Y. DOES THE IMPOSSIBLE!

He's invented a machine that creates masterpieces, and no two are alike! Here is how Peter's invention works:

Open window attracts cat [a] walking on board [b] which causes string [c] to upset pailful of paint [d] letting paint fall in a skinny can [e]. Little hole at bottom of can [f] causes paint to drop into billboard [g] for an op art picture.

The op art painting [h] will be put into an art museum and win $90,000 for the most creative work of art.

ARTISTS CONTINUE THEIR WORK

Machines may come and go, but artists go on forever—and we're glad of it. Inventions, animals, airplanes—whatever you draw, we want to see it.

HOW TO DRAW ART

Draw in black ink on white unlined paper for clear reproduction and send to "Be An Artist" c/o Gold Key Comics at the address given below.

BY WESTERN PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE AN ARTIST

You can also participate in the Comics Club fun by sending in jokes to be printed in the JOKES ON YOU page—a feature that's a real favorite. If you can write a joke, put it down on paper and send it to us, so everyone can enjoy it.

Listen to what Judy Marcantili of De Quincy, Louisiana, overheard:

Ben: That's a good joke! Why don't you send it to Gold Key Comics?

Jim: I can't.

Ben: Why not?

Jim: That's where it came from!

Thanks, Judy!

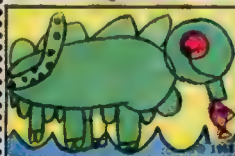

Submit jokes to JOKE ON YOU, c/o Gold Key Comics at the address given below.

MONSTERS WON'T GO AWAY

They just wouldn't give up when they heard we were going to print drawings of other animals plus inventions and airplanes on the pages where they've been running loose. So we're letting a few more in the side door before giving them a well-deserved rest from their snorts. Here's a cute little monster sent by five-year-old Scott Wiley of Waterford, Ohio.

THE SKIMMING MONSTER

It skims the water and picks up fish with its big tooth.

The Witching Apple

Daffy Duck and Beaky Buzzard wandered through the noisy street carnival, looking at the bright lights, listening to the blaring music, and wishing they had some money to spend. Beaky had one lone nickel in his pocket, and Daffy had nothing.

A smiling man stopped them. "Wanna buy a magic apple, boys?" he asked, holding up a candy apple on a stick. "Only five cents, and it'll make three wishes come true when you eat it! That's the truth!"

"We don't believe in magic," Daffy jeered. "I do!" Beaky spat. "I'll take that apple!" And he gave his nickel to the man.

Beaky offered Daffy a bite, but the disgusted Daffy refused. So Beaky ate the whole apple.

"Now I'll make my first wish," he said, closing his eyes. "I wish we could earn some spending money some way."

They walked on slowly, but nothing happened. Then, as they passed the tent of Madame Lola, the fortune teller, a hand grasped Daffy's arm and pulled him inside. Beaky followed him into a shadowy tent.

"Wh-Who are Y-YOU?" Daffy stammered, looking at a veiled figure standing beside a glowing crystal ball.

"I am Madame Lola," the figure answered, holding a small china doll and two silver dollars in the crystal ball's glow. "I will pay you these two silver dollars to take this doll to Tom, the toy man, in the end booth. I have decided not to buy it."

"My wish came true," Beaky gasped, and Daffy cried, "You've got two messengers, lady!"

Madame Lola gave the doll to Daffy. "I will pay you after you deliver the doll," she said. "Go quickly, and talk to no one!"

Daffy and Beaky skipped, hopped, and jumped down the crowded street. Daffy tossed the doll in the air and caught it deftly. "Don't do that, Daffy!" Beaky warned.

But Daffy only laughed and tossed it again. As he reached to catch it, a running child bumped him. The falling doll slipped past his fingers and smashed on the ground.

"Now you've done it!" Beaky gulped. He stooped to pick up the pieces and gulped again. "Daffy! A ring was inside the doll!"

Daffy quacked excitedly, "A diamond ring!"

"Come with us, both of you!" a stern voice boomed as hands grasped their arms. They looked up into the unsmiling faces of two police officers.

"We d-didn't know the ring was in the doll," Daffy choked.

"And I suppose you didn't know about all the other jewelry that's been stolen at this carnival," one officer snapped.

The bewildered boys shook their heads and explained what had happened. Finally, the policemen locked them in a jail cell and went to find Madame Lola and the toy man.

"I sure wish we were outa here," Beaky groaned, as he and Daffy waited and waited.

A moment later, a policeman opened the cell door. "You can go now, boys," he said. "We caught Madame Lola and Tom, the toy man, at the bus station with the stolen stuff."

As they walked back to the carnival, Beaky sighed, "I still wish we had some money."

"Wait, boys!" a voice called, and a woman rushed up to them. "Here's a little reward for finding my diamond ring," she said, placing a five-dollar bill in Beaky's hand.

"My three wishes came true," Beaky chorled. "Do you believe in magic now, Daffy?"

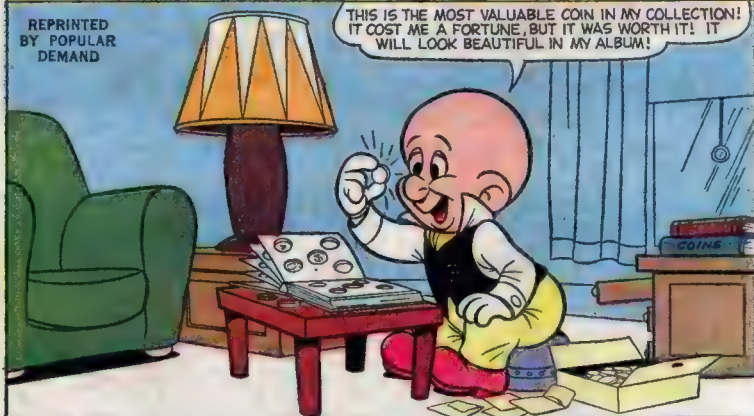

"I sure do," Daffy grinned. "Let's try to find the apple man and buy another apple!"

DINOSAURIA

BRACHIOSAURUS

Some hundred million years ago, this huge fifty-ton dinosaur lived in and by the swamps of the prehistoric world. Measuring over eighty feet from nose to tail, with its great neck, it towered over forty feet high! Its tremendous legs were shorter in back, letting the tail and rear sink down as it progressed. Because of water's natural buoyancy, the giant dinosaur was able to move about easily in swamps, its tail helping to propel it along. The Latin name for this bulky dinosaur means "arm lizard."

The brachiosaurus' elevated nostrils permitted it to breathe with its head just above the surface of the water.

Hatched from an egg weighing about a mere two pounds, by maturity the brachiosaurus' weight increased 50,000 times and its length 60-fold.
